Summer Jobs: Things to Consider

Summer employment can be an opportunity to explore interests, gain experiences, and make new connections. When thinking about summer employment, there are some important factors to consider. Ask yourself the following questions to help you evaluate your current situation and determine your best options:

- Where will I live/how do I find roommates?
- Will I be able to return in time to prepare for school? Summer employment may overlap with Greek recruitment, residence hall responsibilities, etc.
- In what area of the country/world do I want to work?
- Will I be able to come home at all during the summer if I want/need to?
- What (if any) expenses will be covered by the employer?
- Will I develop skills relevant and applicable to future career goals?
- Will I make contacts that might prove beneficial in my career?

Sample Summer Employment Options

Many employers from a variety of industries have opportunities available for students looking for seasonal work. There are, however, certain employment areas that tend to hire more staff during the summer season. Below are some examples of these employment areas.

Recreational/Summer Camps

Recreational camps are found in all parts of the country. Counselors, special topic instructors, and maintenance and kitchen staffs are among the types of positions camps hire for summer work. Camps may be single-sex or coeducational with campers ranging from 6-18 years of age. The best time to apply is between January and March.

Camp counselor experience is beneficial for people interested in education, rehabilitation services, leisure services and studies, special education, and any special topic area (music, theatre, etc.) that may be offered at the camp. While having related experience is beneficial for the application process, it is not a requirement.

National Parks

There are two kinds of employers that hire for the National Park System: federal or private concessionaires within the park. Both types of employers tend to provide housing and meals at a low cost. The National Park Service provides a range of opportunities, but some example areas include visitor programs, law enforcement, and road/park maintenance. Private park concessionaires offer a wide variety of positions as well, from kitchen staff and groundskeepers to guest relations. Most temporary positions require irregular hours of work, including weekends, holidays, and evenings. Applicants may apply for employment year round.

Amusement Parks

Like recreational camps, amusement parks hire people for several kinds of positions in Florida and other areas of the country. Parks will often provide low-cost lodging and meals, uniforms, and free or reduced admission for guests to the park. Length of required employment will vary. Employment opportunities may include:

- Maintenance keepers
- Air brush artists
- Photographers
- Ride operators
- Internal auditors
- Entertainers
- Concessions vendors

Domestic/International Recreational Tours

Working as a tour guide can be a rewarding and demanding seasonal job. Tour companies may have domestic and/or international tours. Some cities and historical sites also hire tour escorts. The main duties of a tour guide include facilitating local arrangements, ensuring the safety of tour guests, and providing regional commentary when necessary.

The peak season for tour programs is May through October, with tours lasting from a few hours to 21 days. The tour company typically pays all housing and meal expenses for long-term travel tours.

Most organizations provide training for their tour guides at the specific work site. However, there are organizations that offer additional information and training on becoming a certified tour guide.

Experience leading groups, patience, communication skills, and energy are all valuable skills for a tour guide. As with many summer jobs, persistence is the key in finding a position with a tour company.

Cruise Ships

Like the national park system, cruise ships may employ people directly or through private concessionaires. Benefits of cruise ship employment may include free or reduced room and board, few expenses, permanent residence while in port, and an opportunity to travel and participate in port activities. However, you may have to share quarters with other staff members. Uniforms or a clothing allowance is usually provided. The typical work week is seven days a week for six to eight hours a day.

Cruise ship employers will expect proof of citizenship (for example, a passport or birth certificate) and may require a photograph in the application process. When applying, it is a good idea to address cover letters to a specific person if possible and refer to the names of the ships associated with the organization to which you are applying.

Typical areas of employment on a cruise ship include:

- Crew members
- Catering
- Hospitality/Hotel
- Activities
- Entertainment
- Salon/Fitness
- Officers

Waterfront Areas

During the summer months, many tourists flock to waterfront areas where they enjoy beaches, rivers, or lakes. Most waterfront employers require applicants to have or agree to participate in some special training either as a lifeguard, rafting guide, or sailing instructor. Red Cross lifeguard training, CPR certification, and advanced first aid certification are often required. Waterfront resorts may hire typical hotel and restaurant personnel. Sample opportunities at waterfront areas may include:

- River guide
- Lifeguard
- Shuttle driver
- Vendor
- Hospitality

While this guide includes information to get you started in the search process, there are other helpful ways to engage in the process.
