This bibliography contains citations about the cognitive information processing (CIP) theory-based approach to career development and career services developed at Florida State University. This application of cognitive information processing theory integrates theory, research, and practice in order to improve the design and delivery of career services for individuals in educational and related human services settings. The bibliography is organized in terms of general principles, foundations of the CIP approach, comparative theoretical perspectives, CIP research, dysfunctional career thoughts research, CIP applications, Career Thoughts Inventory, additional assessment and intervention resources, materials for client use, training materials, CIP reviews, CTI reviews, and CTI on the Internet. For additional information, contact any of the authors at the address listed above.
Contents

Overview of the CIP Approach ...................................................................................................................... 3
General Principles ......................................................................................................................................... 3
Foundations of the CIP Approach ................................................................................................................. 4
Comparative Theoretical Perspectives ......................................................................................................... 4
CIP Research ................................................................................................................................................ 4
Dysfunctional Career Thoughts Research .................................................................................................... 6
CIP Applications .......................................................................................................................................... 13
Career Thoughts Inventory .......................................................................................................................... 20
Additional Assessment and Intervention Resources .................................................................................. 23
Materials for Client Use ............................................................................................................................... 24
Training Materials ........................................................................................................................................ 24
Reviews - CIP ............................................................................................................................................. 25
Reviews – Career Thoughts Inventory ........................................................................................................ 25
Overview of the CIP Approach

General Principles

Foundations of the CIP Approach

Comparative Theoretical Perspectives

CIP Research

Dysfunctional Career Thoughts Research

Dagenhart, M. C. (2005). Relationship of college students’ response styles on the Strong Interest Inventory to scores on the Beck Depression Inventory and the Career Thoughts Inventory. Dissertation Abstracts International: Section B: The Sciences and Engineering, 65, 4823B

Greene, Y. L. (2002). Relationship of college students’ response styles on the Strong Interest Inventory to scores on the Career Thoughts Inventory Dissertation Abstracts International: Section B: The Sciences and Engineering, 62, 3842B.

CIP Applications

Career Thoughts Inventory

Additional Assessment and Intervention Resources

Materials for Client Use

Training Materials

Reviews - CIP

Reviews – Career Thoughts Inventory

